

Parents Club Holds Dads-only Day at Crystal Cove

(Published Feb 17, 2006 in the Laguna Beach Independent)

Park interpreter Winter Bonnin explains that lobsters shed their exoskeletons, often found at the shore. With her is Chuck Keller, left, and Steve Leonard with baby Jack, a Parent Club outing in Crystal Cove.

Parents Club holds dads-only day at Crystal Cove

The newly formed Laguna Beach Parents Club held its first dad's only event on Jan. 28. Dads with babes in front packs and back packs, as well as dads with toddlers and school-aged children, carefully made their way down to Crystal Cove tide pools.

State park interpreter Winter Bonnin led the outing during one of the year's lowest tide days, allowing them to observe many animals that live in Crystal Cove's inter-tidal zone.

Laguna Beach Parents Club is a new organization for families dedicated to creating a supportive environment in which to raise children.

Completely run by volunteers, the club is organizing playgroups for various ages of children, field trips, educational programs, fitness walks, activities for spouses, couples, families, and more. This club is open to all parents with children of all ages who live in Laguna Beach.

To learn more about the Laguna Beach Parents Club, visit their website at www.LagunaBeachParents.com